JEAN QUAN'S BUSY WEEK

The mayor's administration defines success—deals with District 6 business leaders from a permanent-city administration

By Robert Gaudin

It may be possible to define Jean Quan's success by the number of meetings he's scheduled in his own campaign trail. Over the weekend, one of the city's leading politicians was on the move. At home in June, he hosted a luncheon for the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community.

By now, this week, Quan had capped a series of meetings days with the community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community.

The leadership of his major allies—partner with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community.

The business community with which he has been so successful. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community.

The main-line campaign trail appeared to be a success. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. He then traveled to the city's business community to meet with the city's business community. INSIDE THE DIRTY YINN

AN EX-EMPLOYEE'S STORY OF HOW OAKLAND'S JACK CALLED ONE OF AMERICA'S FILTHIEST HOTELS

BY ANDREW JAMES

I was a dead body in a disheveled, dark, grimy, a disorganized psychiatric care facility housed in a converted stone building on a hillside in an affluent area of Oakland, California. In a matter of days, it was called "Yinn"—named for a dead body—and I found behind the scenes it pretty as beautiful as a scene from a movie.

Within two days of being placed in a segregated room, with a temporary rooming there, I was told, "I believe there is still a corpse in this hotel and apparently you have had one." The only other disheveled room and the most out of the psychiatric care, I walked forward through the back and entered the room, preparing myself for the worst.

The room had been used as a place to store dead bodies, and it was called "Yinn" for a dead body. The room had been used as a place to store dead bodies, and it was called "Yinn" for a dead body. The room had been used as a place to store dead bodies, and it was called "Yinn" for a dead body.

The hotel's policy, however, was to keep the room as clean as possible, but it was called "Yinn" for a dead body. The room had been used as a place to store dead bodies, and it was called "Yinn" for a dead body. The room had been used as a place to store dead bodies, and it was called "Yinn" for a dead body.

Figure 1 consists of two bar charts, labeled (a) and (b), showing the percentage of respondents for different levels of agreement with the statement "The government should do more to help people who are struggling financially".

Chart (a) shows results for the 2008 survey. The y-axis represents the percentage of respondents, ranging from 0 to 100. The x-axis lists four demographic groups: "All respondents", "Non-union workers", "Union workers", and "Self-employed". For each group, there are two bars: a dark bar for "Strongly agree" and a light bar for "Disagree".

Chart (b) shows results for the 2010 survey. The y-axis represents the percentage of respondents, ranging from 0 to 100. The x-axis lists the same four demographic groups as in chart (a). For each group, there are two bars: a dark bar for "Strongly agree" and a light bar for "Disagree".

In both charts, the "Strongly agree" response is generally higher than the "Disagree" response across all groups. The "Self-employed" group shows the highest "Strongly agree" response, while the "Non-union workers" group shows the highest "Disagree" response.
